there was many a member of the pith helmet brigade that knackered his liver during the time of the raj drinking gin with its quinine containing tonic to protect himself from malaria